I hold a BSc (Hon) in Geography and Geology and I am currently pursuing my Phd at the University of the West Indies in the field of Development Geography, where I assess the vulnerability and impacts of climate and economic change on the livelihoods of Jamaica's small-scale coffee farmers and the industry. I have presented at several conferences such as 6th British-Caribbean Geographers Conference, "The Caribbean Region: Adaptation & Resilience to Global Change" (2014) and the Commonwealth Geographical Bureau Workshop, "Food Security, Resilience & Climate Change" (2015). Additionally, my non-academic work involves being a self-taught artist where my pieces have been exhibited in both Jamaica and Canada. One of my most successful ventures was where I created pieces that were auctioned at the Toronto Benefit Gala in 2013 and 2014 so as to raise funds for the UWI Toronto Gala Scholarship.
