

FACUNDO MARTÍN
CONICET/Universidad Nacional de Cuyo
Argentina

Facundo Martín is a CONICET (Scientific and Technological National Research Institute) Postdoctoral Fellow at the Human, Social and Environmental Sciences Institute (INCIHUSA) and Assistant Professor, Department of Geography, National University of Cuyo, Mendoza, Argentina. He holds a PhD in Social Sciences from the Buenos Aires University and a Ms Sc in Agrarian Social Studies from FLACSO/Argentina. He has also Postdoctoral Studies at Universidad Federal Rural de Rio de Janeiro in the field of Environmental History. He works with a research team on space-society and nature-culture relations in drylands, political ecology of water and vulnerability to global environmental change. In the last three years he has been co-leading research projects as “La dimensión social del cambio ambiental global. Vulnerabilidad de los productores agropecuarios de la cuenca del rio Mendoza a los eventos extremos de clima y agua” (UNCuyo) and “Innovative Science and Influential Policy Dialogues for Water Security in the Arid Americas” (IAI-CONICET).