

ALEXANDER RINCÓN RUIZ

Alexander von Humboldt Biological Resource Institute
Colombia

Graduate in Economics and Master in Agricultural Economics from the Universidad Nacional de Colombia and a PhD in Environmental Sciences (prof: Ecological Economics) from Universidad Autónoma of Barcelona. Visiting doctoral researcher at the University of Cambridge's Department of Land Economy. Has worked as technical secretary of the environmental satellite account in Colombia's National Administrative Department of Statistics (DANE), technical coordinator for the Latin American and Caribbean Initiative for Sustainable Development (ILAC – Colombia), consultant to Colombia's National Planning Department (DNP), researcher for Colombia for the Millennium Ecosystem Assessment (MEA), researcher for the Humboldt Institute group of indicators, and teacher in the areas of environmental economics, ecological economics, environment and development and econometrics in different universities of Colombia. Author of several publications related to his areas of interest. Since 2011 he is titular researcher and coordinator of the research line in "Integral valuation of the biodiversity and the ecosystem services (VIBSE in Spanish)" at the Humboldt Institute in Colombia.