

ALFREDO RIBEIRO NETO, D.Sc.
Federal University of Pernambuco
Brazil

Alfredo Ribeiro Neto is Professor of Department of Civil Engineering at the Federal University of Pernambuco – Brazil. His work focuses on the Hydrology and water resources with emphasis on hydrological modeling, impacts of climate change in water resources and remote sensing and geographic information systems applied in water resources. He holds master degree in University of Brasilia and PhD degree in Federal University of Rio de Janeiro, both in water resources. Since 2009, it is vice-coordinator of the subnetwork of Water Resources of Brazilian Research Network on Climate Change. Collaborator of the National Assessment Report of the Brazilian Panel on Climate Change.