

SANDRA MEJIA
Delegacion Union Europea
Nicaragua

Sandra Mejía received a Msc in Food Security and Nutrition from The University Centro Americana (UCA) in Nicaragua and she also hold two Post-Graduate course from the International Institute for Geoinformation Science and Earth Observation (ITC) in Enschede, The Netherlands; one on Rural Development and Land Ecology Survey, and the second one in Cartography. She also participated on the Multidisciplinary Program of Space Studies, organized by the International Space University in conjunction with the University of Nakhon Ratchasima, Thailand. She is also a Part time University Professor at several National Universities addressing the following Subjects: Demography, Water management, Food security and Risk Management, and indigenous issues. During her career has been involve in different projects and researches within governmental and international organizations as well, dealing with local development, conflict resolutions in post-war area, strengthening of local Government, Visibilization of indigenous people in development program, natural resources management, disaster management, good governance, food security, promotion of Remote Sensing/GIS at national and local level and related issues. She has participated in the publication and presentation of several proposals and scientific articles in Nicaragua and worldwide dealing with the issues before mentioned. She is currently working in EU Headquarter of Nicaragua as a Task Manager dealing with Bilateral and Regional projects, and other thematic lines as well. Furthermore she is the focal point to follow issues related to Climate Change, Water resources management, water and sanitation, ICT and related issues, Indigenous people, Energy, Risk Management.