

SARAH KELLY
University of Arizona
USA

Sarah Kelly-Richards is a graduate student in the School of Geography and Development at the University of Arizona where she works as a Research Assistant with the Bureau of Applied Research in Anthropology. Her masters research examines the water-energy nexus in relation to infrastructural challenges to water management in the U.S.-Mexico border region, particularly focusing on the provision of water and sanitation in the urban periphery of Nogales, Sonora. Using participatory research methods, she explores the local impacts of large infrastructural projects while also analyzing urban water and land management.