

SIGRID ANDERSEN
University of Paraná
Brazil

Sigrid de Mendonça Andersen is a Brazilian, Social Scientist from the Federal University of Paraná, Brazil (UFPR) and PhD in Environmental Geography from the University of Aberdeen, Scotland (2005). Three years of research doctorate were conducted at the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC), in Santiago of Chile. She is Specialist in Environmental Management and Environmental Impact Assessment (University of Aberdeen, Scotland); and in Environmental Policies, Law and Institutions in South America (FARN, Argentina). She is presently a professor at the Federal University of Paraná, Brazil, and member of the Brazilian Association for Defense Studies (ABED); and the Association of Universities of the Montevideo Group (AUGM/MERCOSUR), making research on environmental public policies, geopolitics and sustainability. She is currently vice-coordinator of the Pos Graduate Program in Environment and Development (MADE) UFPR.