

MARÍA DOLORES LETTELIER
CONICET – Universidad Nacional de Cuyo
Argentina

María Dolores Lettelier is a CONICET (Scientific and Technological National Research Institute) Doctoral Fellow at the Human, Social and Environmental Sciences Institute (INCIHUSA) and is a professor in extension and rural development, National University of Cuyo, Mendoza, Argentina. She is agronomist and she holds a MS Rural Development from the High Council of Scientific Investigations (CSIG) in Spain, MS Rural Territory Management from the Postgraduate College of Mexico and she is ending a Doctorate in Social Sciences in FLACSO- Argentina. She worked in the project “Coming Down the Mountain: Understanding the Vulnerability of Andean Communities to hydroclimatologic variability and Global Environmental Change”. Also, she is a participant researcher in the “Vulnerability to Climate Extremes in the Americas” project. Dolores does research in the field of rural development with a territorial approach.