

ELENA LAZOS

Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México Mexico

Professor and researcher at the Institute of Social Sciences (UNAM) since 1992. Bachelor in Biology (UNAM, Mexico, 1983), Master in Anthropology (ENAH, Mexico, 1987), Ph.D. in Anthropology and Socio-Economic of Development (EHESS, France, 1992). Responsible of the coordination of 25 research projects with international and national collaboration of colleagues and students.

Teaching at several universities of Mexico, Switzerland, France, Greece, Bolivia, and Canada. 80 courses given at the level of postgraduate studies, 20 courses given at the level of undergraduate studies in Social Anthropology, Biology, and Geography. Principal advisor of thesis (director): 20 PhD students, 30 in Masters and 12 in Undergraduate Studies. Secondary advisor of thesis: 20 at different level. 120 International conferences in 20 countries. 140 national conferences in Mexico.

Prizes: Fray Bernardino de Sahagun (INAH), Distinción de Jóvenes Universitarios en Investigación (UNAM), Ministère de la Recherche, France.

Author of 5 books (two in press), Coordinator of 2 books, 45 chapters in books and 20 scientific articles.

Main topics of research: Political ecology, Conservation and management of natural resources, Gender and natural resources, perceptions of risks and ecological deterioration, collective action, biotechnology and transgenics in rural societies, conservation of agrobiodiversity, ecosystem services and poverty.